II. Justification for Proposed Changes

In 2006, eligibility requirements for Research Policy and Advisory Committee awards were changed to exclude those who had start-up funds of at least $100,000, coinciding with the first year of the Research Growth Initiative (RGI). The cap on start-up funds had a disproportionate effect on faculty from the natural sciences, with only 2-3 applications per year coming from these faculty since the beginning of RGI. Therefore, the divisional distribution requirements for funds and for membership representation no longer make sense.

Additionally, total applications have decreased from a high of 110 for AY 2005-06 funds to 40 for AY 2009-10 funds. The reduced workload no longer warrants such a large committee size.
